Course Description:

The course addresses some of the key issues facing the business environmental-ecological destruction and the growing need for sustainability and green products. Society, not the business entrepreneur, is the basic undertaker of all activity. Marketing, as per Bartels (1968) is that activity undertaken by society at large to meet its consumption needs- the producing, distributing, and consuming of products needed for human existence. This course has been designed to equip you with the tools to practically apply Environmental Marketing Principles to a range of current and emerging sustainability challenges.

The course addresses the paradigm that Marketing has a purely commercial role to play in the economy, and highlights how Environmental Marketing differs from other Marketing sub-disciplines such as 'Social Marketing' and 'Cause Related Marketing' by emphasizing the importance of integrating key elements into marketing strategies that are focused on affecting the conservation ethic of communities and its individual members:

By the end of the module, students should be able to answer the following questions: What does it mean for a firm to have a "green product" or good "environmental reputation?" Who are green consumers? How much added value can environmental reputation add to a product? How can firms promote their green products? How important are environmental issues in the global marketplace?

Make-up exam must be re-scheduled within 24 hours of the missed exam date or no credit is given. Advance holiday plans or airline reservations are not acceptable reasons for re-scheduling the planned exam date.

Academic Integrity

School demands the highest standards of conduct from students, faculty and staff. All students are expected to be the highest character and to behave honestly in their learning and in their behavior outside the classroom. Students are responsible for knowing and understanding these standards; misunderstanding of the appropriate academic conduct will not be accepted as an excuse for academic dishonesty. If a student is in doubt about appropriate academic conduct in a particular situation, he or she should consult with the instructor of the course and the program director.

Academic dishonesty or cheating includes acts of plagiarism, forgery, fabrication or misrepresentation, such as the following:

- ✓ claiming the work or thoughts of others as your own
- ✓ copying the writing of others into your written work without appropriate attribution
- ✓ writing papers for other students or allowing them to submit your work as their own
- ✓ buying papers and turning them in as your own
- ✓ having someone else write or create all or part of the content of your assignments
- ✓ submitting the same paper for more than one study or class without explicit permission from the faculty members

Students who falsify or present falsified documents may be dismissed. Prospective students who are discovered to have presented falsified admission documents prior to admission shall be denied admission to the program. Should it be discovered after admission that a student had presented falsified documents for admission, such admission may be annulled and the record of academic achievement removed from the academic record, with appropriate notations. Such annulments or denials may be reviewed after one year.

Course work (a quiz, assignment, report, mid-term examination, research paper, etc.) in which a student has been dishonest generally will receive zero points towards the grade in fulfillment of a course requirement, and/or the student may receive a failing grade for the course. The professor of the course determines the appropriate consequence.

When a student cheats in a major or final assignment such as a comprehensive examination or presents plagiarized material in a major or final assignment, that student shall receive an F in that particular subject. Student cheats on more than two exams shall be dismissed from School.

Grades

Grades are considered final when they are submitted to Academic Services. Students should ask their instructors for explanations of their grades if they believe errors were made. Students could consider filing an appeal to the Academic Committee and ask for judgment if they believe they were treated unfairly. Though students are entitled to an explanation of their grades, they should be careful not to harass instructors. Repeatedly calling an instructor about a grade or a few points on an exam or telling an instructor that a certain grade is needed could be considered harassment.
