Course Description:

This course introduces students to the financial markets environment in which business organizations operate. The main financial markets to be covered in the course include the equity, money, bond, futures, options and foreign exchange markets. The course provides insights into the operation of the financial system, different financial institutions and types of finance. Students are expected to distinguish between types of financial markets and institutions according to their main functions and identify the range of financial products and services offered by financial institutions. Students will have the opportunity to describe and illustrate the price, yield and discount rate of financial instruments, and identify the techniques involved in the use of derivative instruments. This course combines a theoretical and empirical approach with comparisons being made between the domestic and overseas financial systems.

On completion of this course students should:

- Understand the Australian banking system and describe the role of regulatory bodies in regulating how banks manage their capital.
- Describe the types of equity securities that companies can use to raise capital and how the securities can be listed and traded on the stock exchange.
- Apply different valuation techniques to determine share prices.
- Describe the characteristics of different types of debt securities and be able to price them.
- Describe different theories of how interest rates are determined and explain the relationship between the determining factors.
- Understand the mechanics and conventions of the foreign exchange market and the motivation of different participants in trading foreign currencies.
- This involves: (1) Reading, interpreting and transposing FX quotations. (2) Calculating cross-rates. (3) Identifying the factors that determine the value of a currency.
- Gain an understanding of the characteristics of derivatives instruments (futures and options contracts), the different motivations for their use and how they are traded.
- Specifically you should: (1) Recognize which types of futures/options contracts to use to hedge various risk exposures. (2) Appreciate the various risks involved in trading derivative instruments. (3) Describe the factors that determine the pricing of derivative instruments.
- Posses the ability to discuss the link between the theory of financial markets and the reports in the financial press.

Four activities occur over the whole term. These are:

1. Class participation and discussion. For each chapter students will have 10-20 multi choice questions to complete at home and then discuss in class the following session. Students will be assessed individually based on their contribution to class discussion.
2. Group assignment. The length of the paper is 3000 words. Topics and materials will be provided and discussed in class. The oral presentation of the group assignment will be between 10 to 15 minutes in length and must be accompanied by a brief written outline.
4. Class tests. Two 50-minute tests that will contain either multiple choice questions and/or short answer questions.
5. Final Exam. A 100-minute test consisting of multi-choice questions and short answer questions.

Academic Integrity

SISU expects honesty from students in presenting all of their academic work. Students are responsible for knowing and observing accepted principles of scholarly research and writing in all academic work.

Academic dishonesty or cheating includes acts of plagiarism, forgery, fabrication or misrepresentation, such as the following:

- claiming the work or thoughts of others as your own
- copying the writing of others into your written work without appropriate attribution
- writing papers for other students or allowing them to submit your work as their own
- buying papers and turning them in as your own
- having someone else write or create all or part of the content of your assignments
- submitting the same paper for more than one study or class without explicit permission from the faculty members

General Principles

SISU is committed to principles of trust, accountability, clear expectations and consequences. It is also committed to redemptive efforts, which are meaningful only in light of these principles. Students will be granted due process and the opportunity for an appeal.

Academic dishonesty offenses generally are subject to incremental disciplinary actions. Some first offenses, however, receive severe penalties, including dismissal from the program.

General Disciplinary

The following is a non-comprehensive list of possible actions apart from dismissal from the program: warning from a professor, program director; a lower or failing grade on an assignment, test or course; suspension or dismissal from the course; suspension or dismissal from the program.

Disciplinary Actions for Specific Offenses

Some academic dishonesty offenses call for specific disciplinary actions. The following have been identified:

Falsification of documents: Students who falsify or present falsified documents may be dismissed. Prospective students who are discovered to have presented falsified admission documents prior to admission shall be denied admission to the program. Should it be discovered after admission that a student had presented falsified documents for admission, such admission may be annulled and the record of academic achievement removed from the academic record, with appropriate notations. Such annulments or denials may be reviewed after one year.

Dishonesty in course requirements: Course work (a quiz, assignment, report, mid-term examination, research paper, etc.) in which a student has been dishonest generally will receive zero points towards the grade in fulfillment of a course requirement, and/or the student may receive a failing grade for the course. The professor of the course determines the appropriate consequence.

Final assignment: When a student cheats in a major or final assignment such as a comprehensive examination or presents plagiarized material in a major or final assignment, that student shall receive an F in that particular subject. Student cheats on more than two exams shall be dismissed from SISU.
